

The cover art features a stylized, high-contrast illustration. At the top, the words "IRON CURTAIN" are written in large, bold, white letters with a 3D effect, set against a background of the American and Soviet flags. Below the title, a large, dark silhouette of a tank is positioned in the foreground. In the background, the Spasskaya Tower and the Spasskaya Gate of the Moscow Kremlin are depicted in a reddish-orange hue. The entire scene is set against a blue background with faint, large-scale portraits of Dwight D. Eisenhower and Nikita Khrushchev. The bottom of the cover has a red background with white text.

IRON CURTAIN™

A game by
DANIEL SKJOLD PEDERSEN
& ASGER HARDING GRANERUD

IRON CURTAIN™

2 players
ages 12+
20 minutes

A COLD WAR GAME

COMPONENTS

- 18 strategy cards (10 US & 8 USSR)
- 1 starter card
- 1 scoring card
- 24 red & 24 blue Influence cubes
- 1 yellow scoring marker

SETTING UP THE GAME

- Distribute the Influence cubes so the US player gets the 24 blue, and USSR the 24 red cubes.
- Place the starter card in the middle of the table, and the scoring card off to a side. Put one blue and one red Influence cube on the starter card.
- Put the yellow scoring marker disc on the yellow spot in the middle of the Ideology points track, found on the scoring card.
- Shuffle the 18 strategy cards and deal 5 strategy cards face down to each player.
- The remaining deck of 8 strategy cards is put to the side for now (still face down).
- In the 1st round USSR chooses the starting player. In the 2nd round whoever is behind on Ideology points decides (still USSR if tied).

HOW TO PLAY THE GAME

The game is played over 2 rounds. You have 4 turns in each round. In the 1st round both players get 5 strategy cards, in the 2nd round 4 cards each.

When it is your turn you must take exactly one strategy card from your hand and play it. Once played, the turn passes to your opponent. In the 1st round you will play 4 of your 5 strategy cards this way. The 5th strategy card that is left over after you've had your 4 turns is put aside face down for the 'aftermath' in the final scoring when the game ends (together with your opponent's 5th strategy card. It doesn't matter who played which strategy card, so just put them on top of each other). Place these 'aftermath' cards next to the scoring card.

Then deal 4 new strategy cards to both players for the 2nd round. In this round you play all 4 strategy cards you were dealt (still alternating taking one turn at a time). Once both players have played all their strategy cards, you do a final scoring of the aftermath & ALL regions.

The game ends immediately if a player at any time reaches the final space (as shown by the US/USSR flag) at the end of the Ideology points track (this is effectively the same as leading by 8 points). The game also ends immediately during the final scoring, if the final space is reached.

TAKING A TURN

On a turn players play exactly one strategy card from their hand and follow these 3 steps in order:

1) Place the strategy card, 2) Check for scoring, 3) Event and/or Command action.

1) Place the strategy card face up on the table and expand the active countries

For now ignore all other aspects of the strategy card than the region it belongs to. Note that each region has a specific color (e.g. Europe is blue). Place the strategy card face upon the board, adjacent to a neighboring card of the same color/region (diagonals are NEVER considered neighbors in this game). If there are no adjacent neighbors available, either because they have been blocked off by other strategy cards, or simply because you are placing the first card of that color/region, then you may place the card adjacent to any card already on the table.

Example A: If playing the Vietnam card, it can only be placed at either A or B.

2) Check for regional scoring

This step doesn't happen so often, but it is very important when it does, so make sure you familiarize yourself with it. Ignore all other aspects than the color/region and regional size of the strategy card you JUST played. The regional size shows how many of the 19 cards in the game are of that color/region (18 strategy cards + 1 starter card). If the strategy card you JUST played was the last card of its kind in its specific color/region, the region now scores. Take for example the Asia region (Example B), it has a size of 3. If there were already two Asia cards face upon the table and you just played the third one, then Asia would score.

There are two elements to a region scoring, the basic scoring and the bonus.

The basic - dominating cards:

Your aim is to dominate face up cards on the table. You dominate a card by having more Influence cubes on it than your opponent (one extra Influence cube is enough to dominate). For each card you dominate in the region at the time it is scoring, you gain 1 Ideology point. Each time you gain 1 Ideology point, move the yellow scoring marker 1 step closer to your flag on the scoring track. If tied on Influence cubes neither player scores the card.

Command action

This is the core action of the game, and you generally use it to place as many Influence cubes onto the table as shown on the card. Using less Influence cubes than shown is allowed, and if you ever run out you can freely pick up your own cubes from elsewhere. If the card played was of your opponent's alignment, then you can never activate the Event yourself, and thus must always play it for the Command.

However, there are some restrictions when you place Influence cubes:

- You can only place them on cards that already have your own Influence cubes, or on cards that are neighbors to cards that have your own Influence cubes on them (never diagonally). This also counts for the card you just placed. You must have Influence cubes on a neighboring card to reach it!
- Chaining is not allowed. Only Influence cubes that were already on the board before your Command action count. In other words, if you Command 2 Influence cubes, you cannot place the first one on a card, and then use that first cube to get access to a second card.
- You may split the Influence cubes between cards as you wish.

Example C: USSR can Command Influence cubes onto all cards, except the blank card this turn. USA would have access to all cards, also blank card C. USA is also controlling South Africa in this picture.

Controlling a card

Controlling a card is a very important element of Iron Curtain, as it limits the room your opponent can maneuver and makes it harder for him to contest your domination of the card. You control a card if you have at least 2 Influence cubes MORE than your opponent on that card. When you want to use a Command action to place influence on a card your opponent controls, you must use 2 Influence cubes to place 1. The 2nd cube is wasted and put back in the supply. You place Influence cubes one at a time so may 'break' control on the first placed Influence cube by reducing the lead to less than 2, and then Command subsequent Influence cubes there as normal without wasting further.

Event action

Events are either stronger but somewhat restricted Command actions (and then always follow the rules from the Command action above), or break rules in different ways. The Event on a card is the written text explanation. Remember that you can only ever play a card for either the Event or the Command, though your opponent may activate his Event when you play his cards. Each Event is unique and you will learn them as you play.

One of the ways in which an Event may break the core rules explained above, is by the keyword "Infiltrate." If an Event allows you to Infiltrate cubes, then you can place them freely as described on that card. Here you are not restricted by having access through neighbouring cards. Equally importantly, you also ignore control when Infiltrating. If you are out of Influence cubes at some point late in the game you may always pick them up freely from any card and put them where your current Command/Event action allows.

END GAME SCORING

During the game the yellow scoring marker moves back and forth on the scoring track when regional scoring or specific Events make it happen. When both players are out of cards in round 2 the end game scoring is triggered. Go to aftermath scoring and then a final regional scoring. Note that if any of these steps brings the yellow score marker to the final flag of either player, the game ends immediately with a win to that player.

Aftermath scoring

Reveal the two facedown strategy cards that were put aside in round 1. Count the number of Influence cubes on US and USSR associated Events on these two strategy cards only (It doesn't matter who played which strategy card). The side with the highest total scores Ideology points equal to the difference in cubes (to a maximum of 3 Ideology points).

Regional scoring

All regions score in the following order: Europe / Middle East / Asia / Africa / South America / Central America. At this point a region scores even though not all of its cards are on the table (e.g. Europe would score even if there are only 5 Europe cards on the table because one was saved for the aftermath). Beware that this means some regions will score twice per game, while others will not.

The player with the most Ideology points wins. If tied the US wins.

CREDITS

Game Design: Asger Harding Granerud & Daniel Skjold Pedersen

Artwork/Layout/Illustrations: Jessica Eyler

Art Director: Sonia Neill

Editing/Development: Sean Lashgari & Derek Stucker

Special Thanks:

Jim Dietz
Rasmus Schou Christensen
Søren Hebbelstrup
Anders Hebert
Kristian Hedeboe Hebert
Martin Holst
Julie Burmeister
Renée Jessen
Lars Wagner Hansen
Jeppe Norsker
Sagad Al-serjawi
Brage Bjerrebaard
Michael Andresen
Morten Weilbach
Uffe Thorsen
Ole Palnatoke
Jacob Engelbrecht-Gollander
Henrik Marott Holse
Andreas Petersen
Dennis Friis Skram
Peter Krog Meyer
Otto Plantener Jensen
Ryan Thiebaud
Donna Dinger
Jason Dinger
Anthony Racano